HELLO GENTLEMEN

I would like to give a warm and delicious welcome to all of the readers out there. I hope that you enjoy this month's May issue and that it tickles you in all the right places. Maybe the slight touch of a feather or the smooth lines of a leather whip tracing down your body. What ever turns you on and brings out your Animal.

I hope that you enjoy my photo shoot that was Burlesque and old Glamour Movie Star inspired. I have too say it was a lot of fun getting dressed up and being given the opportunity to play and be myself in front of the camera. It's an authentic shoot with my creative prop ideas to enliven your primal urges and to broaden your mind. That is art.

I am genuinely thankful that I was given this opportunity, it's a huge honour to me. So thank you Penthouse for making me your Cover Girl and for allowing me to be MYSELF.

I look forward to meeting you all in person at Sydney's Sexpo in May to sign magazines and have a chat,

With Love and Hugs

STRIP TEASE

1 PENTHOUSE CLUBS

Call us biased but The Penthouse Clubs offers an experience where the magazine comes to life. Relax and dine surrounded by Pets and dancers world wide. Auckland and Perth locally, Paris and Moscow in Europe and 11 clubs in the US. Why not visit them all!

2 SAPPHIRE DAYCLUB, LAS VEGAS

Sapphire Las Vegas is the only Gentleman's day club. Sit in a pool of entertainers and exotic dancers. Spring Break for adults wading around in "boob soup", book a private cabanna or boys week end in Vegas.

3 PURE PLATINUM

Heats for Miss Nude Sydney are at four locations starting with Pure Platinum. The team put on a great show with Dancers between heats and plush spaces for private shows. It's footy season for connoisseur of fine women. Catch the prelim, join in the half time entertainment and cheer on your favourite entertainer.

4 . ZUMANITY, LAS VEGAS

Getting tickets to this show will keep you in the good books for three reasons. 1. You made a reservation. 2. There are more then just naked women performing 3. Foreplay, the circus performers do all the work for you and if your partner isn't up for sin city after seeing this show, then its time to find some one who will.

5 STRING-FELLOW'S ANGELS

Owned and operated by the "King of Clubs" Peter String Fellows, Angels is located in Soho and the perfect place to mix business with pleasure. Three floors of Moroccan themes with his Angels draped on every level, Stage shows and VIP booths available along with the famous "Red Room".

6 SPEARMINT RHINO, MELBOURNE

Expect the best in adult entertainment, with some of the hottest entertainers from around the world. We recommend the VIP Lounge which has its own stage especially for buck/hens nights or birthdays. The girls here always put on a great show when we visit.
*Mention Penthouse for promos.

7 TIGER BAR, THAILAND

1,800sqm space set up with 60 bar counters and hostesses everywhere, including above you, as some dance on the bar counters. It's the place where music blasts at high levels, so conversations turn into shouting matches and the bar girls try to convince you to stay.

8 THE MENS GALLERY, MELBOURNE

Home of Dancer (page 35) Miss Frankie Blaze, This is the place to catch dancers pushing there skills for Triple Threat competitions, Miss Nude Victoria and the massive Miss Nude World International pageant. These guys are serious about showing you a good time.

9 LE CRAZY HORSE, PARIS

Le Crazy Horse is a strip club that continues the french tradition of strip tease without the tacky Can-Can. Two shows a night but avoid the dinner show at all costs. The only con here is that the girls don't do private shows but its the best "theatre" in Paris.

10 STRIP, STRIP HOORAY

Burlesque at its best and the inspiration of almost any dancer to tie on some tassels. The goddess of lingerie fetish, Dita Von Teese, will be bringing her Burlesque: Strip Strip Hooray! tour to Australia in June this year. If you catch this show you can put it in your "Spank bank" forever.

EINSTEIN'S GRAVITATIONAL WAVES ARE REAL

AFTER more than 100 years of searching, an international team of physicists has confirmed the existence of Einstein's gravitational waves. It is one of the biggest astrophysical discoveries of the past century.

"We have detected gravitational waves," Prof David Reitze, executive director of the LIGO project, told journalists at a news conference in Washington DC.

The discovery, which is a culmination of decades of searching, marks a monumental breakthrough in our quest to fully understand the nature of gravity. It was made possible through collaboration between a number of labs around the world that use laser fired through tunnels to sense ripples in the fabric of space-time. The waves which they detected were just a fraction of an atom in width.

"Gravitational waves are akin to sound waves that travelled through space at the speed of light," says gravitational researcher David Blair, from the University of Western Australia. "Up to now humanity has been deaf to the universe. Suddenly we know how to listen. The Universe has spoken and we have understood."

WHERE DID THE GRAVITATIONAL WAVES COME FROM?

The physicists were able to trace a signal which came from the merger of two black holes over a billion years ago. The event was so massive that it warped space time enough so that the ripples could reach us, over one billion light years away. The merger radiated three times the mass of the sun in pure gravitational energy.

MAN DIES TRYING TO SWALLOW WHOLE CHEESEBURGER

And it has come to that point ladies and gentleman. The burger phenomena has hit a cheesy low after one man choked to death when he tried to swallow a whole cheeseburger in one bite while drinking at a friend's house.

He apparently told his friends to "watch this," before folding and stuffing the entire cheeseburger, according to one witness.

A verdict of death by misadventure was recorded. A sober reminder to us all that no matter how tasty, cheeseburgers are dangerous and can kill you if not eaten responsibly.

YOU'RE ALL A BUNCH OF FILTHY HAND SNIFFERS

If someone told you that after shaking someone's hand, they had to smell their own hand, what would you say to them? You would probably avoid any further contact with that person, right? Well I'm sorry to say, but according to scientific research into the matter, you and everyone else is guilty of doing that exact thing, you filthy hand sniffer.

A new scientific study has revealed that people unconsciously sniff their right hand after shaking it with others as part of a process to pick up chemical signals. "We started looking at people and noticed that afterwards, the hand somehow inadvertently reached the face," says Noam Sobel of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot.

To find out if people were smelling their hands, as opposed to scratching their nose, his team filmed 153 volunteers as they greeted members of their team. Some were wired up to psychological instruments that would record airflow to the nose, taking the necessary measurements.

Charles Wysocki at the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia, agrees. "It fits with the general idea that there is a lot more chemical communication going on that we are unaware of".

So don't worry, it's not like you're doing it on purpose, unless you're former Western Australian opposition leader, Troy Buswell. Pick up any useful signals, Troy?

YOU CAN NOW SELL AIR

Yes, you read the headline correctly. People are now farming air and selling it to clients in polluted cities who are paying upward of $160 for a single jar. The product is "cultivated" by, wait for it... air farmers.

The air is collected from specific areas under a certain set of circumstances, depending on the client's wishes, "sometimes we'll be at the top of mountain, other times at the bottom of a valley". Whilst other people want "air collected when it's very windy, some people want still night air".

China have been massive consumers of clean air, buying their canisters from Canadian company Vitality Air. Their website reads: "Vitality Air strives towards providing its customers with fresh, clean, portable, canned air and recreational oxygen in a can for breathing and enhancing health."

You can choose from Banff Air, Lake Louise Air or premium oxygen in either single or twin packs. A single 3L canister of Banff Air will cost you $20, and provides "approximately 80 breaths of fresh Banff Air."

This is not a joke. We repeat, this is not a joke.

DROP EVERYTHING AND INVEST IN THIS

Germany, a country known for world firsts, has just dropped an absolute humdinger. German scientists recently switched on the largest nuclear fusion machine in the world. Cool but what does it do? Well, it produces large amounts of hydrogen plasma... Duh. Only joking, we don't actually expect you to know what it does.

The invention itself could literally change the world as we know it. And apart from having an awesome name (The Wendelstein 7-X stellarator), it also has the ability to produce hydrogen plasma which is similar to harnessing the limitless energy of the sun. No, not like they did in The Force Awakens.

Basically, we'll have the ability to replace polluting fossil fuels and nuclear fission facilities. "It's a very clean source of power, the cleanest you could possibly wish for," physicist John Jelonnek from the Karlsruhe Institute of Technology, told the Associated Press. "We're not doing this for us, but for our children and grandchildren."

WIFE CRASHES HER OWN FUNERAL, HORRIFIES HUSBAND

Yes, you read it right. A woman has indeed crashed her own funeral and scared the shit out of her husband who, understandably, thought she was dead - why else would he be having a funeral after all?

The details? He paid three hitmen to have her killed. They kidnapped her, drove her to a remote location and tied her up. Before killing her they asked, "What have you done to your husband for him to want to kill you?". Apparently her answer was pretty convincing because they soon dropped her off on the side of a road and told her to "warn other women" so this doesn't happen. Fast forward a few days and old hubby is "mourning" at the funeral, when, out of nowhere appears his wife, still very much alive.

"Is it my eyes?" She recalled him saying. "Is it a ghost?"

"Surprise! I'm still alive!" She replied.

The man, who we can only assume is now her ex-husband, was visibly terrified. "I'm sorry for everything," he wailed. We bet you are buddy. We bet you are.

MAN THROWS ALLIGATOR INTO DRIVE-THROUGH WINDOW

And the winner for the most creative way to get charged with a deadly weapon goes to... a Florida man accused of throwing a live alligator through a restaurant's drive-through window.

A man threw a 1.07 metre alligator into a Wendy's drive through window. After he was caught, he admitted to picking it up off the side of the road before making his way to Wendy's, where he lobbed it through the window.

He's been described as an outdoorsman who views none other than the Aussie legend himself, Steve 'The Crocodile Hunter' Irwin, as an idol. "It was just a stupid prank that he did that's now turning into this; it's stupid," his mother told Washington Post. "He's a prankster. He does stuff like this because he thinks it's funny."

MICHIGAN SENATE PASSES BILL OUTLAWING ORAL AND ANAL SEX

Michigan has just passed a bill which makes gay sex punishable by up to 15 years in prison. The bill, which puts sodomy on a level with bestiality, bans all forms of anal and oral sex - making it technically illegal to express homosexuality sexually.

"A person who commits the abominable and detestable crime against nature with mankind or with any animal is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for no more than 15 years," states the legislation.

Considering we get bent over by politicians on the regular, this bill should come as no surprise; however it is still a total load of shit. Don't despair, even if you can't express your sexuality in Michigan, you can still do the following in other states of the U.S.:

- Marry your cousin
- Have sex with some animals
- Eat another human being
- Throw missiles

THE FIRST MUSIC STREAMING SERVICE STARTED IN 1897

Once upon a time in a land far, far away, there existed no mobile phones, computers or internet. In what must've been a dark time for humanity, people were left to their own devices - such as their brains and books to entertain themselves.

And then in 1876 the telephone was invented, and the first words ever spoken "Mr. Watson come here I want to see you", by Alexander Bell, the inventor of the telephone. Raunchy stuff.

Then in 1897, the telharmonium was invented by lawyer Thaddeus Cahill. The 'Spotify' of 1897 utilised existing phone networks, broadcasting from a central hub in midtown Manhattan to hotels, restaurants and homes around the city. Subscribers could pick up their phone, ask the operator to connect them to the telharmonium, and the wires of their phone line would be linked with the wires emerging from the telharmonium station.

However far from the automated, digital services of today, the music had to be manually generated.

If one were to venture to the music plant, or telharmonium hall as it was known, you would find 200 tonnes of machinery (necessary to generate the tunes), and humans, because they were required to play the specialised keyboards which generated the tunes.

"Apparently he had two players playing continuously, 24 hours a day," says Andy Cavatorta, a telharmonium enthusiast and sound artist who designed and built Bjork's gravity harps. "It was a sort of weird, non-stop eerie telharmonium music, including a lot of pieces that were composed just for the instrument." You could expect to hear symphonies, lullabies or other music, at the will of the players.

QR CODE ON KETCHUP BOTTLE LINKED TO Hardcore PORN SITE

Talk about saucy, Heinz was left red faced after a QR code on its ketchup bottle led one man, Daniel Korell, to a hardcore porn site instead of the 'design your own bottle' competition page that he was trying to access.

The incident occurred after the original competition, held between 2012-2014 expired, and so too the website. The URL has since been picked up by German porn website Fundorado and the site once owned by Heinz, was replaced with porn.

Korell wrote on his Facebook page: "Your ketchup really isn't for underage people."

Heinz's social media team apologised and responded on Korell's Facebook image: "We really regret the event very much and we're happy to take your suggestions for how we implement future campaigns on board."

Fundorado, looking to capitalise on the situation and pick up some free advertising, also comment on the photo, and offered Korell a year's free subscription.

BABIES ARE BEING BORN WITH ABNORMALLY SMALL HEADS

If you needed another reason to dislike mosquitoes, you just got one. Those winged annoyances that make you slap yourself, break out the Aerogard or lose a night's sleep because you just can't find the damn thing, have started spreading Zika, a mosquito-born virus.

If you're an adult, you don't have too much to worry about, unless you're pregnant. If contracted and passed onto an unborn child, Zika can result in abnormally small heads in newborns and is associated with other disorders such as decreased brain function. And you thought itchy bites were bad.

Zika was first identified in rhesus monkeys in the Zika forest in Uganda in 1947. Five years later, it was found in humans. The disease has now spread through most of the Americas.

CRUSH

MARGOT ROBBIE

WE have a massive crush on Margot Robbie. She is incredible. She's an Australian actress who know from that show Neighbours. We won't judge you if you used to watch it, can't say the same if you still do...

Margot Robbie was born in Queensland; hands down the best thing the state has ever done for Australia. She starred in Wolf of Wall Street where, during the audition, she slapped co-star Leo. That clearly impressed him, she ended up landing the roll. You go girl. She played Ann Burden in 'Z for Zacharia' and she's appearing in 'Legend of Tarzan' later this year, but what we're really excited about is her role in Suicide Squad, where she'll play dangerous super villain Harley Quinn. What a dream girl!

You're welcome to come say hi at the office any time, Margot.

BLAZE OF GLORY

A TRUE TRAILBLAZER IN THE ADULT
ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY

Hair & Make Up by Christina Di Pasquale
Written by Christian Ganaban

“ If you have frequented The Men's Gallery on a Friday or Saturday night you probably would have come across Frankie J Blaze tear up centre stage. This gifted showgirl is a professionally trained dancer who combines her talent with sex appeal to deliver some of the most exhilarating performances that leaves the punters wanting more.

Starting in the industry as a bartender at a rival club, she started dancing at The Men's Gallery after she was fired for using the photocopier inappropriately. Since joining The Men's Gallery she has steadily worked her way into being a feature performer competing and winning titles in events such as Miss Men's Gallery, Sisters of Seduction and Miss Nude Victoria.

In 2015 she was awarded the title of Miss Nude Hobart, which qualified her to partake in the Miss Nude Australia pageant series. Not only was she competing, she was also assisting The Men's Gallery's head choreographer Beck Porter train the other 3 Miss Nude Australia competitors from The Men's Gallery. She was the competition stand out and took out first place earning the title of Miss Nude Australia 2016 but her success didn't stop there as The Men's Gallery team also took out second and third place, a feat never achieved in Miss Nude Australia's 25 year history.

2016 has started out just as promising for Frankie as she has toured the country promoting herself and will look to also feature at the Gentleman's Club expo in New Orleans later in the year on her way to competing in Miss Nude World. She is also playing an integral part of The Men's Gallery as she continues to help choreograph showgirls for the Triple Threat competition, Miss Nude Victoria and the massive Miss Nude World International pageant series that will be hosted at The Men's Gallery in July.

MOSS CREEK

The Kindred Spirit

Moss Creek Moonshine's rich southern heritage dates back to the early 1900's when John M. Craig produced his corn whiskey to celebrate times with friends and family. John's legend grew during the prohibition era and what was once a hobby soon became a way of life. Operating an old copper still on the edge of Moss Creek, South Carolina, he produced some of the best Moonshine east of the Mississippi. Moss Creek Moonshine - The Kindred Spirit

LET'S GO TO SEXPO!

THE HEALTH, SEXUALITY & LIFESTYLE EXPO, IS THE WORLD'S NO.1 CONSUMER EXHIBITION, CREATED FOR THE ADULT INDUSTRY

From humble beginnings in 1996, the first ever Sexpo was held at the then named Carlton Crest Hotel in Albert Park, and attracted over 8,500 people. From then, the show has gone from strength to strength and can boast a long list of achievements including:

- > Nearly three million patrons having visited Sexpo since creation;
- > The most visited consumer exhibition in Australia;
- > The longest running consumer exhibition of any type in Australia;
- > Sexpo has been held in all major Australian capital cities as well as the Gold Coast, Townsville and Hobart;
- > Sexpo has expanded internationally to South Africa (since 2006) and the UK (since 2015)

with further expansion plans slated for 2017;

> Millions contributed to the Australian economy. The event itself has never lost touch with its core attraction, which is providing a safe and comfortable space where visitors can be entertained, educated and informed about all the latest trends and technology of the adult industry.

Sexpo has seen an impressive line-up of celebrities and industry guests grace its stage over the years, including powerhouses of the local and international adult movies industry, TV stars, and international identities, health experts and many more.

Sexpo's main demographic over the years hasn't really changed either with females (52%) aged 18-35 making up a majority of patrons. A further 60% of all Sexpo patrons come with a partner.

2016 will feature Sexpo's 20th Birthday, and while the look and feel of today's Sexpo may be a bit different to the Sexpo of 20 years ago, the event has still retained the cheeky element that has made it so successful. Amusement rides, live stage acts, shopping, health and wellness seminars, special interest zones and a renewed focus on sexuality, health and lifestyle, are all recently added components of the modern Sexpo.

As you can see by these pictures, the advertising may have changed, but the crowds haven't.

The next Sexpo will be in Sydney from May 12-15 @ the Royal Hall of Industries & Hordern Pavilion, Moore Park. For tickets and information, please visit www.sexpo.com.au or follow us on FaceBook, Instagram and Twitter.

THE MAN WITH MAGNETISM

PENTHOUSE SPOKE WITH HARD-WORKING,
DOWN-TO-EARTH IRISH MAN MICHAEL
FASSBENDER ABOUT RETURNING TO HIS ROLE
AS MAGNETO, PLAYING STEVE JOBS AND DEALING WITH SUCCESS IN HOLLYWOOD

IT would be hard to find a more pleasant, gracious, and self-effacing actor than Michael Fassbender. He is so happy to have reached the top flight of his profession that he is incapable of feeling anything but “gratitude and satisfaction” over his ability to find meaningful roles. With his Oscar nomination for Steve Jobs further confirmation of his professional standing in Hollywood, the Irish-German Fassbender is about to return to his familiar role as Magneto in X-MEN: APOCALYPSE. This time out, however, he takes his character into far more dangerous and “extreme” territory, joining forces with Apocalypse (Oscar Isaac stepping into the villain role) to punish the human race for “all the pain” that he and other mutants have suffered.

“(Magneto) is at a very low, vulnerable point where he doesn’t really care anymore whether he dies or not or what happens,” Fassbender revealed about the closely-guarded plot details. “He’s somebody who has been injured, somebody who has all his loved ones taken away from him and is someone who is quite singular in his thoughts...So he’s like, ‘Yeah I’ll join this guy. I’ll go on this path of judgment.’”

Directed by Bryan Singer, the film is building considerable hype as potentially the most brutal and explosive instalment in the X-Men franchise. Apocalypse recruits a team of powerful mutants led by a disheartened Magneto to cleanse mankind and create a new world order. As the fate of the Earth hangs in the balance, Raven (Jennifer Lawrence) and Professor X (James McAvoy) lead a team of young X-Men to stop their greatest nemesis and save humanity from annihilation.

The 38-year-old Michael Fassbender lives in New York with Swedish actress Alicia Vikander, 27, who recently won the best supporting actress Oscar for her work in The Danish Girl.

Later this year they will be seen in the indie drama, The Light Between Oceans, directed by Derek Cianfrance (Blue Valentine) while Fassbender also stars in the action blockbuster Assassin’s Creed, set for release in December.

CLOCKWISE FROM ABOVE:
Fassbender flying high as
X-men's Magneto; playing
Steve Jobs; and as Assassin
Callum Lynch in the upcoming film Assassin's Creed

In conversation, Michael Fassbender is relaxed and charming. For our chat at the New York Film Festival where he was promoting "Steve Jobs," he was dressed casually, smiles often and relishes the "new life" that stardom has brought him.

Michael, is it interesting to be able to keep coming back to the role of Magneto?

Magneto is a fascinating guy and a very complex character that I enjoy playing. There's so much tragedy and drama to his life and having been disappointed by human beings so many times in his life he feels a tremendous inner rage.

Even though the X-Men films have given you massive recognition, you've also gone on to establish yourself as a leading man in very serious dramas. Are you still as eager to remain part of the franchise?

I'm immensely grateful to the kinds of opportunities that have opened up to me because of the success and commercial impact of these films. You need that recognition to help get smaller projects financed and that's very important, obviously. But I'm also very appreciative of the kind of writing and storylines that have been developed over the years and the work (director) Bryan Singer has done.

I also don't differentiate between the work I do (on X-Men) as compared to my other roles. We deal with a lot of serious issues that give the films much greater depth and meaning than what is normally the case in these kinds of big commercial projects. And of course working with a tremendously talented cast is another reason I love working on these films.

After enjoying so much attention in recent years and now with another Oscar nomination under your belt for Steve Jobs, are you becoming less shy about your success?

I was very shy about appearing in public and dealing with all the things that comes when you start having success. I'm much better at all that now, although deep down I'm still a very reserved kind of individual. You don't seem to have changed that much in terms of the way you handle yourself in public or deal with journalists?

My life has changed enormously since I've become successful, but I don't think I've changed the way I respond to people. I still try to answer questions by stating the first thing that comes to my head without trying to filter my responses. I've never been someone who really cares about what other people think of me, so I try to be very open and honest and not affect an attitude in public. I spend enough time acting on a film set - I don't need to do that in real life.

You have both an Irish and German background? What kinds of character traits do you think relate to your mixed roots?

I'm very sociable in private and I think that's typically Irish. It's like if you go to a local pub, by the end of the evening you're going to have made friends with a lot of people and learn so many different stories about their lives. There's an inherent curiosity about people.

On my father's side, I have this German notion of the importance of duty and discipline. I believe that hard work is essential to whatever you want to accomplish in life and that you need to work hard at becoming a good actor. Talent alone is not enough.

Do you enjoy getting the chance to speak German?

I usually speak German best if I'm a little drunk. I understand it very well, but despite the efforts of my grandmother to teach me proper German, I still have trouble speaking the language well.

My parents tried to teach me and speak to me in German while I was growing up in Ireland, but as a kid you want to be able to adapt and fit in more than anything else. But in recent years I've tried to watch more films in German and I definitely would like to make a movie in German one day and that would be an occasion to really work on the language. Do you still enjoy racing cars and riding your motorcycle for fun?

I love it more than ever. I love the risk-taking element that comes from pushing the limits and pushing yourself as far as you can or in the case of racing pushing a car or a motorbike to the limit. I also really enjoy karting because you can still feel the sensation of being very close to the ground and the G-forces that you would experience driving a Formula One car, although not to the same level, but without the risk of getting killed.

You need to focus all your attention whenever you're driving a car or riding a motorbike at high speed. It takes you away from whatever stupid worries you might have and it feels very liberating. It's a great form of release.

What did you take away from your work as Steve Jobs and trying to inhabit that man's mind and soul?

I related to his energy and positive way of looking at the world. In our personal manner, we are very different, but I felt inspired by his sense of vision and ability to observe people and understand their tastes when it came to developing products. Actors are always probing into the psychology of their characters, and Steve Jobs was a master psychologist.

Have you become more sophisticated when it comes to using a computer or your iPhone now?

Sadly, I'm still not that tech-savvy. Sometimes when I'm in a restaurant by myself I will look at my phone, but usually I like to turn it off and I ask my friends to turn off their phones when we're eating together. I just think it's important for people to be able to communicate directly. Usually you're sitting down at a table and you're constantly seeing people texting and the phones are ringing or going bing-bing from messages coming in. We should still enjoy being able to look at each other and talk rather than be at the mercy of our phones every minute of the day!

"ACTORS ARE ALWAYS PROBING INTO THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THEIR CHARACTERS, AND STEVE JOBS WAS A MASTER PSYCHOLOGIST."

What can you tell us about your other new film in the pipeline, Assassin's Creed?

I was a producer on that and it was an incredible experience. I've learnt a lot about the business from doing that. I also enjoyed playing Callum (Lynch). He's kind of lost in life, an outsider. It's an interesting journey that he gets to take.

FOODS TO GET YOUR GIRL GOING

HAVE you ever pondered what it is about certain foods that just seem to leave you feeling amazing whilst others leave you feeling bloated and tired? Remember the saying, you are what you eat? Well, it's true. Foods you eat don't only impact your waist line, but also energy levels, mood, and your gut.

We've done the hard work so you can be sure you never get the "I have a headache" call from your girlfriend after dinner again. Heed our top 10 below and you'll be hanging the tie on your door as soon as you hit home.

1/ Strawberries: A definite sexy fruit. Full of antioxidants they are great for the heart and arteries. Their tiny seeds are loaded with zinc to support a healthy sex drive. Eat them for breakfast, in salads, as a snack or dessert.

2/ Figs: Figs are known to improve libido and boost the production of pheromones. These versatile sweet treats, reminiscent of a curvaceous woman, are great in salads with meat as well as desserts.

3/ Watermelon: Studies have found an enzyme in this melon relaxes blood vessels akin to the effects of Viagra. Enough said. Add grilled watermelon to a salad with feta or grill fruit kebabs on the barbecue.

4/ Dark Chocolate: Not only are strawberries, figs and watermelon a delicious combination with dark chocolate, they are a winning combo for seduction. Eating chocolate releases the same chemical released when we fall in love, need we say more?

5/ Red Wine: It's no news quaffing back vino loosens up the body. Red wine is high in antioxidants, shooing away heart disease and ushering in high-density lipo-protein (the good cholesterol). Limit yourself to one or two to benefit fully.

6/ Shellfish: Shellfish is widely known to hail high amounts of zinc, which is responsible for balancing testosterone levels in the blood. Zinc and lean protein equal aphrodisiac.

7/ Fatty Fish: Limit red meat to twice a week and eat more fatty fish like salmon, trout, mackerel and tuna. Loaded with omega-3, this essential fatty acid is the foundation of healthy sex hormones for both men and women.

8/ Nuts and Seeds: Topping the charts with omega-3 and omega-6, these crunchy nibbles amplify dopamine levels that spark off arousal. Toast them to bring out flavour and top salads or crumb meat for a low carb schnitzel.

9/ Sweet Potato: Not only is the superior sweet potato less starchy than it's white counterpart, it heralds superpowers for fighting high blood pressure.

10/ Rocket: This peppery salad leaf not only tastes zingy, but will also put a zing in your zang. The amount of nutrients jam-packed into a single leaf is astounding, cleansing the body of toxins that could diminish your sex drive.

WE TALK TO COVER GIRL JESSICA BARDOT TALKS ABOUT THE INSPIRATION OF OLD WORLD GLAMOUR AND THE ART SEDUCTION

GYPSY Rose Lee, Dita Von Tease and Carmen Electra all pay tribute to the old world charm of Burlesque. Pop careers have been launched for bands such as Pussy Cat Dolls and recent films starring Cher and Christina Aguilera all bow down to the elegance and class that is burlesque and the art of the tease.

May cover Girl Jessica feels beautiful in feathers and peals with past photo shoots claiming her title as "The Blue Angel". In her conversations with Penthouse Black Label she alludes to the tease being sexier than the act of sex itself.

The shoot is burlesque inspired, what is it about the era that you find sexy?
The Burlesque period was about do you enjoy most about dancing?

I was a ballet dancer for 12 years, and I have studied Tribal Belly Dance and most recently Burlesque and Spanish Dance. I love music and I love to move my body to the rhythms and the bass with my own interpretation and making it my own. I have been told too many times too count that people love the way I move. Even when doing every day simple tasks. I move like a cat agile, seductive but unpredictable. I love to tease and surprise. I guess I just loved to dance and dressing up was always fun.

What's your favorite music to dance to?

I don't really have a favorite style of music to dance too. I choose music to do with how I am feeling. I can be quite deep seduction, mystery and leaving something to the imagination. I loved the periodic costumes the women wear, it's classy and sophisticated. Wearing more leaves a surprise package. I love the slow and tantalising unveiling of their garments... yet they didn't reveal one part of their bodies. It's juicy and what I believe a true goddess epitomises.

"I MOVE LIKE A CAT AGILE, SEDUCTIVE BUT UNPREDICTABLE"

What inspired the shoot?

My photo shoot was inspired by old world glamour and movie stars. Amazing women like Marilyn Monroe, Sophia Loren, and Eva Gabor. These women had kick ass curves and smoking hot natural bodies. They naturally exuded sexual energy without overdoing it. Their inner beauty made them glow even more on camera. Natural born stars.

You used to be an exotic dancer, what internally. I think that is one of the gifts of very creative and artistic people. We feel things and can be more sensitive than others. That's what makes us great. We stand apart from everyone else. We are always leaders.

What do you do in your downtime to relax?

I meditate quite regularly. Probably not the sexy answer people are hoping for. But it keeps me grounded and helps to keep me focused on my goals and my dreams.

Describe yourself in three words?

Intelligent, charismatic and outgoing. That's how I hope I come across to people.

If you could have any super power, what would it be?

To heal people ☺

WEB OF INTRIGUE

SELLING YOUR PRIVACY BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

FOR those of you who don't know (you should), the TPP or Trans-Pacific Partnership is a new U.S.-led Free Trade Agreement. It is extremely complicated and we don't really know much about it because it has been negotiated in secret.

We've been told that everyone is going to benefit from it, great! So why then has it been negotiated in secret... for the last 4 years?

It will likely impact you, your rights online, as well as a bunch of other stuff. So what is everyone else saying about it? Well, there are two distinct narratives taking place:

Those for the TPP

Backers of the TPP include a swathe of wealthy CEO's - Rupert Murdoch, Steven Schwarzman, Goldman Sachs and John Paulson - the Republican mega-donor who made an alleged $3.7 billion from... wait for it - the Global Financial Crisis of 2008, but we've been assured we have nothing to worry about (sound familiar?). We've been told the TPP will promote higher labour standards, protect the environment, protect food safety standards and lower drug costs. However that's just one side of the story.

Those Against It

On the other side of the fence there is a very different narrative. Millions of people from around the world continue to stand firmly in opposition to the TPP. They argue that it prioritises financial interest over privacy, human rights and free speech - it's a suffocating infringement on personal liberties disguised as a Free Trade Agreement.

What we know so far (which isn't much - and is only thanks to Wikileaks) is pretty bad. To put it simply, the stakes are high and if passed, foreign corporations will have the ability to sue governments if they believe a country's laws unfairly diminish their profits.

For example; the Australian government could get sued for billions for making changes to mining law, or fracking law, because corporations decide that it's damaging their profit margins. Essentially, corporate interests will be protected over public and environmental interests, and it seems that this is just the tip of the iceberg.

Here are the top reasons why you should be worried about the TPP

Negotiations Have Been In Secret

All we know about the TPP is thanks to information provided by Wikileaks. Other than that, everything has been kept secret. So secret that members of Congress, state governors, the press, and the public are not allowed to see drafts of the agreement. This extends to Australia, where those involved in the negotiations are not allowed to reveal anything to the public. It raises the question: if we don't have anything to worry about, then why isn't it more transparent?

The Internet

Do you download things illegally off the internet? You might want to think again. If the TPP is passed, ISP's will be forced to hand over the details of individuals (such as you) who have broken copyright law. Companies will have the ability to enforce heavy-handed criminal sanctions and fines, even for unintentional copyright infringement.

If the TPP is ratified you could be threatened with fines anywhere from $10,000 to $100,000, just for downloading a movie..

Greater Corporate Control

The laws of entire nations could be thrown under the bus. For example, cigarette company Philip Morris didn't like it when Australia passed its plain packaging law - because screw you and your health. So they went to court and sued. Tens of millions of dollars in taxpayers money was used to defend the decision, which was ultimately upheld. If the TPP were ratified, however, Australia would be exposed to similar litigation and would have a diminished ability to protect its national interests. Along these lines, the TPP has the potential to undermine national sovereignty in favor of corporate profits.

TECH

NASA TO BROADCAST MARS EXPEDITIONS

IN October 2015, NASA released around 8,400 high-res images taken during the Apollo 11 Moon landings. This documentation was inconvenient for conspiracy theorists that for decades have been using official photographs to claim the landings were a fraud.

If NASA fulfills their goal to send humans to Mars by 2030, there will be less chance of such theories taking hold. Virtual reality will provide compelling first hand evidence of a mind-blowing achievement, with a global audience numbering in the billions riding along with astronauts, exploring the Martian surface in a 360-degree augmented reality.

Dr Jeff Norris is Mission Operations Innovation Lead at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. He was a keynote speaker at Vision Summit 2016, where leading innovators in virtual reality gathered in Hollywood, California in February.

"The arrival of astronauts on Mars will be one of the greatest accomplishments of our generation," said Norris in his speech. "But on that amazing day the astronauts will not be the only ones exploring. They will be supported by hundreds or even thousands of virtual astronauts. Call them telenauts, who are exploring alongside them."

"Our astronauts will look upon that alien landscape with their own eyes. But telenauts will see it from every possible perspective and angle and wavelength offered by all the robots, spacecraft, aircraft and the astronauts on that expedition."

In his speech, Norris announced NASA's future intentions to train regular people as telenauts, exploring virtual environments built out of composite images taken by satellites above Mars and rovers on the surface. Mass numbers of telenauts, defined as "one who explores from a distance," will speed up the process of visually screening Mars. A crowd-sourced approach will allow contributors to mark points of interest for later investigation by scientists.

THIS NEW ADVANCE ALLOWS THEM TO VIRTUALLY TRANSMIT THEMSELVES ONTO THE MARTIAN SURFACE

The VR system is called OnSight and is already in live use at NASA, where it was developed through partnership with Microsoft. Scientists have been reviewing images transmitted from Mars rovers on their computer screens since the late '90s. This new advance allows them to virtually transmit themselves onto the Martian surface, examining geological features and collaborating with colleagues in real time.

Beyond visual exploration, these virtual and augmented realities are allowing scientists to streamline the construction process of spacecraft and instruments. This has the potential to reduce the risk and cost of future missions, as well as helping to meet launch dates by reducing construction times.

Dr Norris' team is at the cutting edge of VR innovation for space exploration – designing tools to control the Curiosity Mars Rover, improving robot-human interaction, and also assisting activities for astronauts on the International Space Station.

When imagining the future of telenauts, it's hard to conceive the clarity and resolution of images that will be achievable by the 2030s. Moore's law dictates that computer power doubles approximately every two years. This doesn't relate to camera sensors, which are analogue instruments. Nevertheless, it will be possible to simply build bigger sensors with supercharged digital processors to send to Mars.

PROFESSIONAL GAMERS ARE MAKING MORE THAN YOU!

WHAT do League of Legends, Counter Strike: GO, DOTA and Starcraft all have in common? If you said games, you are correct. But what do you know about the world of E-Sports? A sports industry that sends competitive gamers around the world to play in video game tournaments, with millions of dollars' worth in prize money to be won.

E-Sports is one of the fastest growing sport industries in the world. Enormous prize pools and lucrative sponsorship deals have taken it far beyond the realm of an occasional escape from reality to some of the largest sporting arenas in the world. Pro-gamers would have you believe they are akin to professional athletes, practicing for hours a day and weeks at time.

Just last year, League of Legends, a game where teams of 3 or 5 players seek to destroy each other's bases whilst fighting for control of a map, held it's 2015 World Championship at LA's Staples Centre - home of the Lakers' and Clippers. The tickets sold out within an hour of the event being posted - the total prize pool was over $18 million.

The fans are dedicated to say the least. In 2014, the Electronic Sports League (ESL) had a staggering 73,000 attendees at a four day tournament in Katowice - and it continues to grow. On Twitch alone (an online TV channel dedicated to gaming) 860,000 people watched the CS:GO finals (a fast paced, strategic 5v5 first person shooter). Overall, the tournament drew almost 9 million unique visitors and 16 million hours watched. There are now 205 million people globally that watch E-Sports. South Korea even has a TV channel devoted to E-Sports.

In 2015, the International Dota 2 Championship had a prize pool of over $18 million, with the first place winners taking home a cool $6 million. A new study has revealed that going into 2017, E-Sports looks to generate $465 million annually, making it the 7th biggest market in terms of volume - bigger than both golf and rugby. And yes, you can bet on it. Recently, an E-Sports championship in China witnessed a higher betting volume than a top Premier League soccer game.

Not bad for pushing a few buttons and looking at a screen. So next time you give shit to your mates, or kids for playing too many video games, just remember that they could be millionaires one day. ☺

MARIA Sharapova has been caught taking performance enhancing drugs in a sports scandal that has shocked pretty much nobody. Elite sports stars taking drugs is almost a cliché at this point – unfortunately, it's no longer even a disappointment. The drug in question here is Meldonium, a Latvian drug used to treat circulatory issues and neurodegenerative disorders. The drug can also be used to boost the body's oxygen uptake and improve endurance. We're going out on a limb here and guessing that Sharapova isn't suffering from any serious heart conditions.

The drug wasn't on the banned substances list until January this year and she supposedly just 'missed' the memo that it was now no longer permissible. Prior to its addition to the banned list, Sharapova had been taking the substance for 10 years.

The issue here is not really the doping, but the push from sponsors, trainers and fans, for sports stars to perform at superhuman levels. There is also the understanding that if other players are doing it, you would be putting yourself at a disadvantage for not doing it.

Perhaps we should just permit performance enhancing drugs in the sporting world – isn't that what we really want to see anyway? Superhuman freaks, pushing the limits of belief in a drug-fuelled, no holds barred, sporting spectacle.

Tennis racquet company Head seems to think so, anyway. Whilst most sponsors like Nike and Tag Heuer are slowly distancing god-awful, lame excuses that they pull out. Remember Warney? - My mum did it. Or, Alberto 'It must've been something I ate' Contador.

To her credit, Sharapova pretty much just 'fessed up straight away. Hands in the air, alright, you got me, I've been bad, and I'm ready to face whatever punishment you got for me. She didn't want to wait for the B test or drag the finding through the legal themselves from Sharapova like she's an awkward party guest, Head are going, well, full steam ahead, with their endorsement deals. The move has attracted criticism from all over the sporting world for practically rewarding bad behaviour.

PRIOR TO ITS ADDITION TO THE BANNED LIST IN JANUARY, MARIA SHARAPOVA HAD BEEN TAKING THE SUBSTANCE FOR 10 YEARS

All things considered, Sharapova took this one on the chin. One of the best things about these doping scandals isn't seeing a sports star getting punished for trying to sneak one by the drug testers, but the system. She is however, lightly suggesting that she receive only a year ban for her transgression. Wishful thinking, probably – her being caught is terrible for the game. A significant penalty will send a message to other players. Her profile will make her the perfect candidate for such a message to really hit home, and if the ITF doesn't enforce its rules at the top level, how can they expect lower ranked players or fans to take the game seriously? ○✚

MADDISON SPENCE TOUR DE AUSTRALIA

ONE MAN'S QUEST TO CONQUER THE RED CONTINENT ON TWO WHEELS.

HAVE you ever wanted to do something really badly, but stopped short of doing it because the little voice in your head told you that it was "crazy"? We've all secretly dreamt of spontaneously jumping on a plane to go jet setting around the world, hiring a Ferrari Spider to take a beautiful girl cruising or, riding 16,000km around Australia on a pushbike. Ok maybe not the last one, but that's exactly what Madison Spence did. After his mate was diagnosed with Huntington's disease, he decided to do his bit to raise money, and awareness for his friend's cause. You would think he at least did a bunch of preparation for it right? Think again.

How did your body cope with the daily exertion?

At first I struggled. I threw up 5 minutes into the trip because I ate too much for breakfast. I did the same on the last day thanks to a $75 burger challenge from McDonalds Create Your Own. The first week of the ride was torture. I had gone for a 30km ride in preparation but as you can imagine, it didn't prepare me for riding 100km plus everyday - it wasn't enjoyable. After two days I couldn't sit on the seat. When my body adapted I usually just rode till dark, no matter how sore I was. There was plenty of time to rest because as soon as it went dark I would go to bed.

How much preparation went into it. Surely you did a lot of research?

Not enough. I knew I wanted to go south first so I could watch the boxing day test in Melbourne. My cousins own a bike shop (Woodsies Wheels) in Woolgoolga, and they sorted me out with all the gear. I suppose I was your typical loner - all the gear and no idea. In terms of research, I picked my mate's dad's brain over a beer before the trip, he had ridden from Sydney to Perth. That was the extent of it.

Any recommendations for someone considering this epic journey?

Bring plenty of butt cream, seriously. Also, don't piss off truck drivers. And if you come to a place you really like, take the time to have a beer with some of the locals, you can learn a lot from them.

We heard you rode nude for a bit.

Did you lose a bet or was there some other motivation?

Some of my mates thought that riding around Australia was not worthy of a donation so I accepted challenges to keep the ride interesting and raise more money for Huntingtons NSW. So, for every km I rode naked I received $15. I did it for 10km but it was not worth the pain which ensued in the following days.

We understand that you met with some opposition along your ride.

Can you tell us about some of your worst experiences?

You always hear about how harsh this country is and I can say that I definitely experienced it first hand. From cyclones up in the Pilbara, strong head winds across Barkly's Tableland, Bushfires around Margaret River, the sheer isolation and remoteness of the Nullarbor, constant traffic down the east coast and you can't forget the endless insects that continually test mental resilience.

What were some of the highlights of your trip?

After enduring the heat, the insects, the traffic and the rest of the elements throughout the day, riding into the sunsets were always really amazing, especially with the backdrop of the desert. If there is one thing you get, it's an appreciation for this country, especially after you've experienced the harshness it throws back at you. Another thing is the people. Meeting all of the weird and wonderful people around the country, who, no matter where I was, were always willing to help me out and have a yarn.

You must have spent quite a few nights far from civilisation. How did you cope with the loneliness?

At first it was quite difficult. I would ring my parents but they would just become more worried when I told them about the day or where I was sleeping, so that became less frequent. By the end I really enjoyed the isolation, even though

I could hear animals all night rummaging around me, the night sky in the desert is something else.

A lot of people would think that what you did is a little bit crazy. Why did you do it?

One of my close friends was diagnosed with Huntington's Disease - a hereditary disease caused by an altered gene and there is currently no cure. I thought that by doing this I could raise awareness and contribute to the cause. When I was overseas, I couldn't help but notice the amount of foreigners who had seen more of our beautiful country than I have. Also, I've never travelled around Australia, so this was a great opportunity to do that, as well as help a great organisation like Huntingtons NSW

What did you eat when you were in the middle of nowhere?

A lot of service station food. I was challenged to eat roadkill and contemplated it, however if you get sick in the middle of nowhere, you're in trouble. So I just stuck to a loaf of bread and a tin of vegemite - that would usually get me the ride I was made to do a shoeie from my seedy shoes and was challenged to eat a burger from McDonald that costed $75 (six angus patties, five servings of bacon, six cheese, a chicken patty, two tomatoes, one piece of lettuce, three hash browns, six pancakes (as the buns), onions and three macaroons). (75% completed).

Continually sleeping on an ants nest become a regular occurrence.

I was booted out of a shopping centre in Karatha for syphoning power cause all my electrics were dead (hadn't had a shower for six days).

A water tanker pulled over gave me some water and turned the hose on and washed me down (Pilbara).

Got challenged to set up a jump on the border and jump the bike from one state to another (popped a tire in the process and took me one hour to make the jump and one hour to fix the bike with no shade in 45 degree heat)

We heard you had a pretty rough experience involving a flat tyre on your rear trailer - tell us what happened there.

Can you tell us about any other uncomfortable experiences?

I was followed by some creep in the top end for three days. I had to sleep with a knife under my pillow for that episode.

Passing out from heat exhaustion just outside of Carnarvon was a bad one. I was rationing water for three days when supply was getting low. It didn't help that I had three consecutive days in the low fifties. However I passed out 25 km outside town and had to walk myself in because I couldn't keep my balance on the bike. This happened again just outside of Broome.

What were some of the most important lessons learnt?

When I felt like I was getting nowhere, especially when you get the map out and see how far you went in a day (not far). I always told myself that 'If I keep moving forward in the right direction I will eventually get home'.

Did you get any chances to unwind along the way? Many chances to party or get lucky?

There were a few places where I put my

"I WAS FOLLOWED BY SOME CREEP IN THE TOP END FOR THREE DAYS. I HAD TO SLEEP WITH A KNIFE UNDER MY PILLOW FOR THAT EPISODE"

about 200km, and when I found a service station I would always treat myself to a chocolate milk and a pie. When I came across a supermarket I would usually buy peanuts, baked beans and tuna. Things tend to go stale very quickly, especially up the top end.

A guy like me, I would surely just give up - What kept you going?

You definitely have to be patient and resilient. The main thing that kept me going were the donations and support. Once I received that first donation there was no turning back - I hate letting people down

What was the funniest thing that happened to you?

I guess there were a few. The funniest moments were usually disasters (every time I had a flat, which would of course happen at the most inconvenient times).

Being abused by drivers and having things thrown at me.

I did a nudie jump off the Forster-Tuncurry bridge for $400 dollars (went to the charity). I got challenged to eat ten cheeseburgers in one sitting for a $250 donation (completed). On the last day of

That was a shocker that afternoon. I guess it was my first real bit of bike trouble. It was New Years Eve and it was around 5pm and about 35 degrees. I was covered head to toe in zinc and my trailer tire had gone all the way through to the tube. I was fairly pee'd off as I was under the illusion tires should last longer and I was still 30km from having a beer at Apollo Bay. I was on the Great Ocean Road at Wye River when it happened. I first went to caravan park reception to see if they had any spare tires lying around, which they didn't. They told me to go to the pub where someone might be able to drive my trailer into Apollo Bay, then I could just ride in. I thought alright lets bite the bullet and see if anyone is driving to Apollo Bay. I took one look at the pub and I knew what was coming. It was full of very pissed vacationers and I looked like a hobo. After meaningless conversations and continually getting heckled, I put my tail between my legs and rode the last 30km with the trailer wheels on the rims. Felt like I was dragging a whale, but I just made it to the bottle shop before it closed.

feet up and had a good time. When you find a place you like, I would usually take a rest day. I always loved seeing friends I hadn't seen for a time and when they offer a place to stay, a shower and a good feed it felt like home. In terms of getting lucky, I'll say once the beard took off and got going my chances went on the slide. Tell us how it felt crossing that finish line at the end?

It felt surreal. I was on such a big high that I just wanted to keep riding. It felt unusual to stop, I guess. However, seeing all your friends and family cheering you on, especially in such a familiar place. Everyday from the moment I left, I thought about crossing that line, which couldn't come quick enough.

What sort of person would you recommend do this?

I'm not sure I would recommend it to anyone. I think the good thing about my trip was that I was unprepared and clueless about what I was getting myself into. However on reflection, I would say it was one of the greatest experiences I have endeavoured and a really positive high point in my life.

POLITICAL CORRECTNESS IS THE REAL MUPPET SHOW

WHAT DO MISS PIGGY, THE DUKES OF HAZZARD AND HUCKLEBERRY FINN HAVE IN COMMON? BY BRENDAN O'NEILL

AT first glance, nada. One's a karate-chopping pig who made toddlers chortle. One's an Eighties TV show featuring a couple of redneck cousins. And the third is a classic of American literature that tells the story of two pals and their various scrapes in 1840s Missouri.

Yet something important unites them. All have fallen foul of the new Culture Correctors. All have been found wanting by finger-wagging culture policers, who insist, like Little Stalinists, that culture must have the right moral message or face the chop.

Miss Piggy has been denounced as a "domestic abuser" for all that handbag-swinging she did at Kermit. No less a magazine than New Republic, voice of American liberalism, wished her good riddance when The Muppets announced in September that Kermit has a new beau.

The Dukes of Hazzard has had a rough ride following the Charleston massacre in June, when a racist lowlife killed nine black people in a church. Because the killer was a fan of the old slavery-era Confederate flag, there followed a culture war against any display of that flag. And one place it appears prominently is on the roof of the Dodge Charger in Dukes.

TV Land said it would cancel reruns of Dukes. Warner Bros promised to stop selling toy versions of the Dukes car. Overnight, echoing ISIS's smashing of old art that offends its medieval sensibilities, Dukes was expunged from much of public life.

As for poor Huck Finn: Mark Twain's novel has 217 mentions of the word nigger. So in 2011, a publisher brought out a "corrected" version with every n-word excised. What a grotesque assault on a classic anti-racist novel. It echoes the antics of Big Brother in Orwell's 1984, who shoves down a Memory Hole anything from the past that's now considered offensive.

In all these cases, art or entertainment was judged, not on the basis of whether it moves or amuses us, but on the grounds of whether it contains the right message.

Such Culture Correction is widespread. The correctors' stomping ground is Twitter; their weapon is the Change.org petition, which they use to demand the fixing or even extermination of stuff that riles them.

In America and Europe, books and plays have been pulled for fear that they will irritate Muslims. Last year in London an art exhibition was cancelled after protesters said it was offensive to blacks. Dapper Laughs, laddish comedian, was ditched by ITV because he fails to celebrate gender equality.

In Oz, Culture Correctors raged against a tour by big-mouth American rapper Tyler the Creator, so he stayed away. Aussie Target stores pulled Grand Theft Auto 5 after a mob of feminists said it caused them "great pain and harm". Opera Australia sacked the Georgian singer Tamar Iveri, after a chattering-class gang went mad over her less-than-PC views on gays.

Under McCarthyism in 1950s America, artists were asked: "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" Maybe today they'll be asked: "Do you now or have you ever held unfavourable views on homosexuality?" Once, it was right-wing authoritarians who insisted artists must have the "right" moral views; now, leftist agitators make that tyrannical demand.

As we've seen with Huck Finn, the past isn't safe from this censorious mania. Old Tom and Jerry cartoons have had cigarettes erased from them. Tintin in the Congo has been pulled from some libraries in Europe on the basis it's racist. Nothing escapes the insatiable culture cops.

During the Cold War, the Stasi, East Germany's secret police, would squish "politically unacceptable" art. Last year, we celebrated the 25th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall, yet, in a terrible irony, it's the outlook of those on the eastern side of the Wall that prevailed. We're witnessing the Stasification of the West, the rise of intolerant cliques that shout down or shit all over art that fails to live up to their moral worldview.

Ray Bradbury, whose 1953 novel Fahrenheit 451, told of a world in which books were outlawed, once said: "There is more than one way to burn a book." Too many people want to "interfere with aesthetics", he said, to make art more politically palatable.

That's truer than ever. Today's pretend-progressives who want to correct culture to make it more women-friendly or cigarette-free are the new book-burners. But in art and entertainment, nothing should be off-limits. Everything should be sayable. Even the unsayable. Especially the unsayable, in fact.

BENEFITS OF TAKING THE BUS

If I live to be 100 I don't think anything will ever top the first time I watched my wife take on a stranger in our very own living room.

My name is Kevin, and my wife Lizzie and I have been married for 11 years. When we were at the 7-year mark the old "itch" really came on, for both of us. We're very open and frank with each other, so we had no problem discussing the rut our sex life seemed to be in.

We've always loved sex and would try just about anything. Anal sex was our favorite for quite some time. You see, Lizzie is always very vocal, and I love it, but when we had anal sex, forget about it! She'd hit the roof and start talking trash, and my cock would explode in seconds. She would squeeze her ass muscles, draining every drop, all the while dirty-talking me until I was hard again. Wow!

But after seven years, even that wasn't as intense as it had been. So there we were, not knowing what direction to take. We even thought of going to a sex therapist. I mean, everything else was great. Our love for each other was still intact, we were still best friends, our careers were where we wanted them to be. It was just in the bedroom that we were stunted.

One day my car was in the shop, so I took the bus to work. As I was standing up in the crowded vehicle I found myself next to a burly-looking guy who was talking to another man sitting in front of him. They seemed to be friends, and the burly guy was leaning in, as if attempting to have a private conversation. But I managed to hear bits and pieces of what they were saying. I didn't mean to eavesdrop, but what I heard was so interesting I couldn't stop myself from trying to hear more.

The guy standing up seemed to be telling his buddy about his wife's latest rendezvous with her boss. From what I could gather, they seemed to be having an affair. But the kicker was that the burly guy not only was okay with this, but he actually watched!

I told myself that I wasn't hearing the whole story. Why would a guy let his wife get fucked by someone else? So, trying to be inconspicuous, I leaned in a little closer. Just as I did so, the bus jerked forward, and I accidentally bumped into this mountain of a man who was telling this story I desperately wanted to hear the end of.

I apologized hastily, and he said no problem, but the collision had now put me in a closer position, and I could hear everything loud and clear as the man continued his tale.

Apparently his wife had brought her boss home for dinner again the night before. Again! I thought. So this was not the first time? Then I told myself to stop thinking and listen.

"Did she wear anything special?" the sitting man asked him. I almost missed the burly guy's answer. I mean, his friend

I LOVE A SHAVED

casually asks him what his wife wore for a sex date with her boss, and the guy answers him as if he'd just asked him what time it was! I decided I'd have to take the bus more often.

I still couldn't believe my ears as the big guy continued with his story. He told how the evening began with dinner, continued with a dip in the Jacuzzi, and ended up with a sexual tryst on the marital bed, with him filming it all while hiding in the closet!

This was all incredible to me, and I didn't even realize I had a boner as I kept listening for a punchline that never came. The seated man said that he couldn't wait to see the video, which the other guy evidently had no qualms about showing him. And then before I knew it they were getting off the bus.

My heart was beating out of my chest, and I sat down heavily in the empty seat as I became aware of my throbbing hard-on. I was both shocked and in awe, and my head was in another place as I tried to make sense out of what I'd just heard. Could it be real? Or was the guy just being funny?

As my stop approached, I decided I'd bring it up to Lizzie that night and get her reaction. I'd just tell her about what I'd heard, and see where it went. For the rest of the day my mind was full of ideas, and my pants were full of me. I had to go to the bathroom three times to jerk off when I couldn't stand it anymore. And each time I added a new scene in my mind, with my sexy wife getting drilled in all her holes and screaming out in delight as I hid in the closet, watching everything. I couldn't wait to get home.

As we sat in the living room over a pre-dinner drink, I started off by telling Lizzie she wouldn't believe what I'd heard on the bus that morning. And slowly I related the story, adding a little material of my own. Once again I got aroused, and I'm sure my excitement was evident to Lizzie, who sat spellbound, hanging on my every word. She was crossing and uncrossing her legs so much that I could tell she was turned on too.

When I finished my tale Lizzie smiled and said I had quite a vivid imagination. When I told her I had enhanced the story only a little bit, she didn't believe me at first. I swore to her that that was what I had heard, and asked her what she thought. "It's hot," was her reply.

"That's it? It's hot?"

"What else would you like me to say?" Lizzie asked. "It's a hot story and—well—good for her!"

"So you liked hearing about it," I pressed. "Do you think you might like to try it?"

She hesitated and turned her face away slightly before she answered. "No, of course—of course not," she stammered. "I mean, we're talking about being unfaithful here. I couldn't do that to you."

"It's only being unfaithful if you do it behind my back," I pointed out. "With my blessing—well, it's kind of like a gift."

"A gift?"

"Ok, maybe not a gift . . . although the guy who got to fuck you would be one lucky son of a bitch!"

She laughed then. "Are we really talking about this?" she asked incredulously. "Do you think you'd actually want to try it?"

"All I know is that the last time I had to go into the bathroom and jerk off three times in one day was when we were in college, and you wouldn't give it up yet, and getting in your pants was all I could think about."

Again she laughed, then got up, came over to me and kissed me hard on the mouth. Her hand went straight to my crotch and unzipped my pants. As she pulled them down she went down with them and sucked my knob right into her wet, warm mouth. She had me hard in a second as she slobbered all over my cock. Then she raised her head long enough to say, "Would you like to see me suck his cock like this?"

Holy crap! I wasn't expecting that, and my cock jumped at the thought of her beautiful mouth engulfing some other guy's dick the way it was engulfing mine. In my mind I became the other guy, and my cock was harder than it had been in some time. Lizzie was aware of this, and she made love to it until I was shouting that I was about to come. At that point she ripped open her shirt and yelled for me to blast my hot sticky load all over her titties. And that's just what I did, although some of it splashed onto her face, which was way hot, especially when she wiped it up with her finger and brought it to her mouth to slowly suck it clean.

Lizzie agreed that I should pick out the man she would fuck, since I knew the type of guy she went for. Actually I already had someone in mind—the guy on the bus. Not the burly guy, but his friend, who was about 35, tall, dark and muscular, just as Lizzie liked them. All I had to do was find him again—and then talk him into fucking my wife. But I didn't think that part would be too hard.

I took the bus at the same time for the next few mornings, and finally, three days later, I saw the same two guys. I maneuvered my way next to them, and after about ten minutes I introduced myself. They looked puzzled.

"I realize you don't know me," I said to the tall one, "but I couldn't help overhearing your conversation the other day, and, well, I have a proposition to make. Can I get off at your stop with you and talk about it?"

There was no way I could exclude the burly guy from our subsequent conversation, but fortunately he didn't interfere. He thought it was all very funny. As for his friend, whose name was Todd, he was very interested in fucking Lizzie—especially after he saw her picture. We made an appointment for that night at seven.

When I got home and told Lizzie, she was

HER HEAD ROLLED BACK AND FORTH AS

speechless. She hadn't thought it would happen so quickly, and she was nervous. I calmed her down, telling her everything would be okay, and that if she wasn't ready I'd call and cancel the whole thing. My patience and support made her feel better, and soon she was getting excited again at the thought of what was to happen. So it was on. She even asked me to shave her pussy for her, and after doing so I really wanted to eat it, because it's so fucking hot when it's all nice and smooth; but I resisted the temptation so that she would be nice and fresh when Todd got there.

At seven o'clock the doorbell rang. I got into the bedroom closet—a detail I had left out when setting this up with Todd—and Lizzie went to answer the door in the see-through negligee she had decided to wear.

In a matter of minutes I heard them making their way up to the bedroom. I heard Lizzie giggle, and I heard the sound of her ass being slapped, which she loves. Then suddenly there they were. I checked the camera on the tripod to make sure it was in position, then opened my robe to start stroking my large pole.

Todd impatiently ripped the negligee off Lizzie, and she moaned. He walked her backwards to the bed, and as she fell back on it he brought her legs up and spread her thighs. He looked down at her treasure and let out a whistle. "I love a shaved pussy, baby," he told her, "and this glistening peach has my mouth watering." And down he went for 15 glorious minutes of the best pussy-munching I'd ever seen.

Lizzie was soon going wild. Her head rolled back and forth as she bucked her hips, jamming her crotch against his mouth. Suddenly her body tensed and she screamed out a litany of dirty, nasty words that sent my cock into overdrive and had me shooting a load that landed on the slats of the closet door and dripped down to the carpet.

When Todd was finished making Lizzie come he had her sit up and pushed her head onto his cock. That organ was most impressive, and she devoured it like a cock-starved whore. She was soon slurping at it, and making loud popping noises as she pulled her mouth off the head of his dick before jamming it back in, grabbing hold of his ass cheeks so she could control the thrusts. The saliva that escaped her mouth dripped onto his come-filled balls. She was moaning and humming as she sucked, and I could see that Todd was in a state that could only be described as euphoria.

Before he could come, however, he pulled away from her and told her to get on her hands and knees. Startled at first, but recovering quickly, my wife scrambled onto all fours. Todd's hand came down to slap her again on her bubble butt, and as if in the same motion his engorged cock pierced her swollen cunt. A loud gasp escaped her lips, and then, as he began to fuck her, she started running off at the mouth. "Oh fuck, yeah!" she yelled. "Fuck, you're so fucking good! Slam it in me baby, oh yeah! Fuck my sloppy pussy. Own it! Own it!" My foul-mouthed little filly was giving Todd a run for his money, because with every demand from her his thrusts became more powerful, until he was almost knocking her off the edge of the bed.

When Todd finally left, my wife and I held each other and decided that this was for us. She loved being used by another man, knowing I was watching over her. The video I had made of them was fucking amazing, and we watch it all the time. And ever since then our sex life has been kept vibrant by the fact that I go out and find a new stranger for my wife to fuck.

Of course, if this ever gets boring and we find ourselves in a slump again, we'll have to come up with something else. But so far it's been working just fine.

— J. Wardlaw, NSW.

THE PURSUIT OF JOY

MY wife Joy and I are both 32 years old, and we have been married for five years. A few months ago, after much discussion, we decided we would like to have a threeway with another man to spice up our sex life.

I had had many fantasies about watching Joy with a younger guy, and our opportunity occurred in July, while we were on holiday in Miami. It was our first time there, and it was beautiful.

One afternoon, as we were enjoying the beach, I came back from fetching us some snacks and sodas to find Joy lying on our blanket and talking with a guy in his 20s. He got up right away as I approached. He was a nice-looking guy with a short haircut and a goatee, and I could tell right away that he and Joy were hitting it off.

Joy introduced me as her husband, and the guy was very polite, and even charming. He said his name was Alan, and that he hadn't meant to intrude, but he thought my wife was so beautiful that he just had to say hello. I invited him to stay and join us, and he thanked me and sat down again. He told us he was on leave from the military, and he had an air of poise and self-confidence which appealed to us both. We enjoyed his company, and after about an hour of general conversation I asked him if he would like to join us later for dinner. He accepted right away, and I thought that, if Joy was as into him as she seemed to be, this just might be what we were looking for.

When we said good-bye, we arranged to meet in our hotel lobby at seven o'clock. As Joy and I walked toward the hotel, I looked back and saw that Alan was watching us. He smiled and waved, and I waved back.

"Are you thinking what I'm thinking?" I said to Joy.

"Yes, I am," she answered. "Do you think it will work out okay?"

"Well, let's see how it goes," I said. "Who knows, maybe he won't even show up."

But sure enough, when we went down to the lobby at seven o'clock, Alan was there waiting. He said he knew of a nice restaurant a little way up the road, so we said fine.

It was indeed a nice place, and we enjoyed our dinner. We drank a lot of wine, and the conversation flowed almost as freely. I particularly enjoyed the way that Alan was looking at my wife; it seemed a most promising start for what we had in mind.

When we got back to the hotel, Joy asked Alan if he would like to see our room. He looked at me for a moment, and I just said that whatever Joy wanted was okay with me.

HE STARTED TO FUCK
HER HARD AND FAST,
WITH ALL HIS FORCE

Inside the room, Joy excused herself to use the bathroom. Alan looked at me and asked, "So, man, what's the deal here?"

I looked right back at him and said, "Would you like to be with my wife?"

"Oh man, yes!" he said, smiling happily. "I was hoping for something like this. She is one hot lady!"

"I have fantasized for a long time about seeing another guy with Joy," I told him. "And I would like to watch the two of you make love."

Joy then came out of the bathroom, and one look at my face told her right away that the deal was on.

We all got undressed, and I was already hard, knowing what would be happening in a few minutes. Alan was very well built, and Joy said, "Oh my god!" when she got a look at his penis. He must have had nine inches, at least two more than me.

The two of them got on the bed as I sat down in a chair. They began kissing, and within a minute Alan started to move down her body, his mouth sliding over her breasts and belly button, and then to her pussy. Her head went back with delight, and I was even more turned on than I had expected. It was obvious that he knew how to please a woman.

Joy was soon moaning and telling me how good his tongue felt on her pussy. Then he moved up and kissed her mouth again as he adjusted himself between her legs. Joy reached down, took hold of his penis and guided him into her. I began jacking off as I watched, almost unable to believe that this was really happening. As he sank into her pussy he was making me feel almost as good as Joy. As he began to pump in and out of her I heard myself saying in my excitement, "Yeah, Alan, fuck my wife for me, man, fuck her real good!"

He looked over at me with a grin, saying, "Oh, you got it, dude!" With that he started to fuck her hard and fast, with all his force. The sweat coming off both of them soaked the sheets, and it wasn't long before Joy stiffened and then gave a series of loud cries as her body convulsed repeatedly. After a few more thrusts Alan gave a yell and shot his jism up inside her. And as he did so I shot my own come all over my chest.

After we all showered we thanked Alan for his service, but he said he was the one who should thank us. We gave him our home phone number and told him to visit us if he was ever in our area.

That encounter really served its purpose of spicing up our sex life. We talk about it often, and it always gets us going. Then last week Alan called and said he would be here in November. He said he was looking forward to it, and you can bet that we are too.

A woman with long, wavy blonde hair is posing on a large, weathered wooden stump. She is wearing a white, semi-transparent, off-the-shoulder crop top with a deep V-neckline, blue denim shorts, and gold, studded high-heeled shoes. She is looking towards the camera with a slight smile, and her right hand is raised in a peace sign. The background is a plain, light-colored wall, and the entire scene is framed by red curtains.
